Pastoral Reflections

I love this quote about “Joy” from Brene Brown: “Twinkling lights are the perfect metaphor for joy. Joy is not a constant. It comes to us in moments – often ordinary moments. Sometimes we miss out on the bursts of joy because we’re too busy chasing down extraordinary moments. Other times, we’re so afraid of the dark that we don’t dare let ourselves enjoy the light” (Brown, The Gifts of Imperfection).

- What are the twinkles of light, of joy, that you have noticed and soaked in over the summer?
- Was it something that you sought out, or that just caught your attention unexpectedly?
- Do you agree with Brown that we can, and often do, miss pops of joy because we are too busy looking for bigger things, or focused on the negative situations or things happening in our lives and the world around us?

I wonder how we can cultivate “joy” more frequently in our lives. I think one way we could do that is by consciously looking for the good in everything. I have found, that the interesting thing about focusing on the positives, by looking for good in everyone and everything, by naming all that I am grateful for each and every day – I begin to notice that there is more good than bad in everyone and everything. I begin to notice that even in what we call “bad” we can still find something “good” – or see good come from it.

Let’s take this pandemic for example. There has been so much negative – number of cases, number of deaths, the long-haul effects, loss of work, slow supply chain, etc. But where have we seen and heard the good? Many families have become closer during the shutdowns. People are cooking more, planting gardens for fresh veggies. The numerous, conflicting demands on our time and attention thinned out over the shutdowns. We have seen more and more stories and situations where people are helping others – handing out food, creating new and innovative ways to get food and supplies into the hands of folks that need them, mowing lawns for free, etc.

When we take the time to “be in the moment,” to soak up the positive energy in the world around us, to breathe in God’s goodness, joy becomes more accessible. It doesn’t make the negative situations or the needs go away, but it can make them seem less strenuous and unsurmountable.

May your month ahead be filled with surprising pops of joy and light, of laughter and music, of surprise visits and calls by family and friends, of quiet beauty and delicious flavors. May your soul be nourished by each encounter with joy.

Blessings and peace,

Pastor Brenda

From your President . . .

As someone who enjoys playing golf, I was fascinated by a program on the Golf Channel talking about the history of the Old Course at St. Andrews in Scotland. It is considered the oldest golf course in the world. The first rounds were played early in the 15th Century. What especially caught my attention was the religious history of the town. The town used to be known as Kilrymont, but was changed to St. Andrews after St. Andrew's relics were brought to the town back in the middle ages. The great cathedral of St. Andrews was built to house the relics. One theory has the relics being brought to the town by the Northumbrians to bolster the support of St Andrew over St. Columba. In doing so, the influence of the Gaels was reduced. The Picts and the Gaels were constantly in conflict. Under Kenneth McAlpin, the Picts and Gaels were brought together and St. Andrews Cathedral became a popular spot for the pilgrims.

The Cathedral was founded in 1162, but was not completed until 1318. The number of individuals flocking to St. Andrews was so numerous by the 15th Century that they first had to be taken to a holding station on the outskirts of town. Most of the pilgrims arrived after taking ferries from two different directions. Traders and shops were set up on Market St. to accommodate the pilgrims.

Unfortunately, the religious history of the community is not without violence. A Protestant reformer, Patrick Hamilton returned to St. Andrews as a follower of Martin Luther. In 1528, he was burned for his beliefs near the University Chapel. John Knox was a Scottish minister and theologian. He was considered the leader of the country's Reformation and was also the founder of the Presbyterian Church of Scotland. Knox was clearly affected by the Hamilton's violent ending. In 1559, he delivered a powerful sermon in St. Andrews urging the pillage and destruction of the cathedral. This message resulted in Catholic images, tombs, and statues being destroyed in the town. The Cathedral was ransacked. Fortunately, the relics were safely removed. By 1560, the Protestant Reformation took hold across Scotland and St. Andrews Cathedral was abandoned.

I learned of an interesting tidbit regarding the golf course. In 1797, St. Andrews Links went bankrupt. The Town Council of St. Andrews decided to allow rabbit farming on the course. Evidently, the council was not too happy with the popularity of golf. Even in the early 1800's, lawyers were kept quite busy. Lawyers representing golfers and the rabbit farmers debated until 1821. A local landowner and golfer, James Cheape, finally purchased the land. He is credited with saving the links for golf.

The golf course only has 11 greens. There are dual holes on 7 of the greens. The 17th hole is the most famous par 4 in golf. What makes this hole so unique, is you literally have to hit your tee shot over a hotel to reach the fairway. A road runs just to the right of the narrow green. Hence, the most famous par 4 hole in the world is known as "The Road Hole".

One of the most famous golfers in the history of U.S. golf is Bobby Jones. He played golf back in the 1920's and 1930's. Back in 1958, he was honored as the second American to receive the key to the city of St. Andrews. The first individual was Benjamin Franklin. After being presented the key, Jones made the following statement, "I could take out of my life everything but my experiences here in St. Andrews and I would still have a rich and full life".

Before watching the show on the Golf Channel, I would have to admit that taking a trip to St. Andrews was not on my bucket list. If I am fortunate to be able to travel to Europe, St. Andrews would now be near the top of my list for places to visit.

Celebrating our Earth

On Sunday, August 8th, York Association's Community Outreach Committee welcomed members of our congregations and from the community to another “GO GREEN” event. This year, we enjoyed a conversation with Jim Antal, where he shared some tips about what we can and should be doing now to help make a difference in our world – based on his book, Climate Church, Climate World. If you would like to listen to that conversation, please click on the link below.

Folks also were able to chat with some master gardeners, from the Penn State Exchange, to learn about what plants are indigenous to our area, and how they can help support and encourage the growth of the bee population in our area. Bees are an essential part of life and growing food. We even got to enjoy tasting some yummy vegan treats made by our own Lisa Young.

We learned that the PFSC (Penn. Federation of Sportsmen & Conservation) is not just about hunting and fishing. In fact, they spend a lot of their time indoors – walking the halls of Harrisburg's capital and meeting with government officials. As Duane Dunmire told me, “We walk the halls to make sure that the fields and streams, animal preserves, state game lands and parks are there for everyone to enjoy.” They love to come out and share what's happening in PA and to help educate folks about safe practices and helping our environment.

We saw 2 totally electric cars, learned what it is like to own and drive them, even discovered the cost of owning and maintaining them. You would be surprised at what they can do and how far they can go on a single charge.

And there was so much more. It was a beautiful day to get together with York Association friends and to make new friends as we enjoyed some time outside on a beautiful, sunny Sunday afternoon.
